

Kim Patten is a Washington State University Extension Professor Emeritus at Long Beach Washington. He specializes in cranberry production and shellfish pest management. He has worked on pest management for 30 years. He retired in 2019, but still enjoys working with the PNW cranberry industry.